LAST Saturday the loving friends,
The children one and all,
Their tokens of affection brought,
For kindly Mrs. Paul.
We have affection for our friend,
The sister and the brother,
But in all the world we dwell among,
There's no one like the mother.

THE Fourth will not be celebrated in this city to-morrow.

THE work of getting the lot ready for the new jail began on Saturday.

MR. W. A. SUDDUTH, of Flemingsburg, was the only lawyer in this circuit who attended the bar association at Louisville.

TO-MORROW being the Fourth of July, a national holiday, we have decided not to issue the DAILY BULLETIN on that day, a step we trust that will be approved by our readers.

THE house in East Maysville lately occupied by Mr. John Rudy, and belonging to Mr. James White, is to be raised up and a new foundation put underneath it. The work will be done by Messrs. Lane & Worrick.

MAYOR JANUARY, by proclamation, has forbidden the use of fireworks or the shooting of pistols within the city limits, to-morrow, and by so doing he is entitled to the thanks of the community. It is a senseless way of celebrating the Fourth any how.

THE moonlight fete, for the benefit of the East End Reed and Cornet Band will take place this evening and to-morrow evening at the public school grounds in East Maysville. There will be good music, a spacious platform for dancing, and refreshments of all kinds. If you wish the boys well you will not fail to attend.

THE moonlight fete at the pavilion in East Maysville, is announced for Tuesday evening, the 4th inst. It is intended to be one of the most interesting of the season, and the arrangements have been made with that end in view. There will be good music, dancing and all kinds of refreshments. Everybody is invited. See advertisement.

THE ladies of the Presbyterian Church of Washington, will give an ice-cream supper for the benefit of the Church next Wednesday night instead Thursday as first spoken of. As it is a worthy object we hope the supper will be well patronized and assure all that they will receive full worth of their money. A delicious supper as well as ice-cream will be served.

MRS. RICHARD LINDSEY, an old and much respected citizen of the Lewisburg precinct, died on Saturday last. The remains were laid to rest at the Maysville cemetery yesterday, attended by a large concourse of friends. Mr. Jesse D. Johnson, another well-known and useful citizen, died on Sunday at the age of seventy-seven years. The funeral will take place from the residence this afternoon.

A Pleasant Event.

MAYSVILLE, KY., July 3, 1882.

Editor Bulletin: I write with pleasure of a little affair that took place on Saturday at the home of Mrs. Lewis Paul in the West End of this city. It being her forty-first birthday, the family and other friends concluded to give her an agreeable surprise. They gathered up stairs while she was dressing for breakfast and profoundly ignorant of what was in store for her. While she was thus occupied one of the young ladies went down stairs and summoning Mrs. Paul into the parlor, gave her a present and while she was admiring it, went to the piano and struck up a lively march. The family and friends then marched in procession down stairs, each bearing a token of love and regard, and formed a circle around the mother, who was perfectly dumb with amazement. The music ceased and her son-in-law stepped up and made a very pretty and touching address. He then took her hand and placed on it an elegant gold ring to be worn for the sake of her children, Naomi and Harry. The children then came one by one, beginning with the youngest and presented to their beloved mother tokens of their affection for her. Last came her mother and husband, each with a present and a kiss. The whole affair was a very touching one and all present were moved to tears, and the scene was concluded by the husband and father leading the family in prayer.

The presents received were beautiful and useful and showed the sincere affection of a family for a kind and indulgent mother. Mrs. Paul was deeply affected by this unexpected profession of love and was unable to control her feelings sufficiently to respond. She is a good woman and every way worthy of the esteem in which she is held. May her future be as bright as the past and may her family always thus honor her. And when the Lord sees fit to call her hence may the angels be ready to greet her.

"REMOVED."

The Mortal Remains of Guiteau—Planted Within the Body of the Jail.

Near the Gallows Upon Which He Expiated His Horrid Crime.

Not the Slightest Evidence of Insanity Yet Discovered.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 1, 1882.

GUITEAU WAS BURIED

This afternoon at four o'clock, in the jail where he was executed, and within a few feet of the gallows upon which he expiated his crime. The burial was an informal affair. About three o'clock John Guiteau, Mrs. Scoville, Attorney Reed, Bertha, the little daughter of Mrs. Scoville and Miss Chevallier called at the jail, Rev. Dr. Hicks the assassin's spiritual adviser, had preceded them. It having been arranged to have the funeral at the hour before named, preparations were at once made for it. The grave had already been dug, after removing the bricks in the corridor, and all that remained was for the body to be placed in it. Meanwhile Mrs. Scoville, her daughter and John Guiteau proceeded to the the chapel on the upper floor, where the body lay. The lid of the coffin was removed, and the sister and brother for some time viewed the remains.

THE FACE AND FEATURES

Are said to have been natural and composed. It required more than a superficial observation to detect where the surgeon's knife had cut into the body. At 3:40 the coffin was brought from the chapel by two of the jail guards, and carried to the open grave. Then the family, Rev. Dr. Hicks, Attorney Reed, Miss Chevallier, Warden Crocker and several of the jail guards collected in a circle around it. Just before the coffin was put into the grave Mrs. Scoville placed upon it a floral wreath, cross and crown. Then Dr. Hicks read a burial service, and pronounced the benediction. Mrs. Scoville also made some incoherent remarks about the justification of her brother's course, and all was over.

NOT A TEAR WAS SHED.

Nor was there any evidence of discomposure on the part of the very few who witnessed the strange burial. So far as the family is concerned, the remains will not again be disturbed. It is certain, if they are removed for sepulture elsewhere, they will be molested. For this reason Dr. Hicks, to whom Guiteau willed his body, prevailed upon the family to allow them to be buried in the jail corridor, and to remain there forever. There is not now any desire on the part of any one to remove them. Although what was left of Guiteau has been given after a fashion, decent burial, all the vital organs have been removed, and only the shell remained. The heart, the spleen, the brain and other portions are at the Army Medical Museum. The brain will undergo a very critical examination, and the next feature of the disgusting business will be a quarrel among the doctors. The official report of the autopsy will hardly be made public for a week yet.

THE RESULT OF THE AUTOPSY.

So far as concluded, shows nothing abnormal except the spleen, which was considerably enlarged, weighing fifteen ounces, which is twice the usual size. The lungs and heart were normal, though there was a slight roughening of the aorta. The brain, so far as examined, presented no evidence of disease.

The weight was forty-nine and a half ounces, which is slightly above the average. The physicians found that the neck was neither dislocated nor fractured, but there was a rupture of the sterno clido mastoid muscle on both sides, and a rupture of the thyro hyoid membrane. The man was strangled to death. The brain is to be frozen and examined in sections.

The report of the surgeons engaged in the autopsy will state positively their opinion as to the mental condition of the man, as indicated by his brain. So far as opinions have been expressed by physicians who attended the autopsy,

NO EVIDENCES OF INSANITY

Have yet been discovered. The brain of the wretch now decorates the interior of a number of jars in Dr. Lamb's office, in the Army Medical Museum. Portions of it are in the hands of the microscopist, and still others are being photographed. The entire mass was photographed, but not very successfully. The intention is now to make as thorough and exhaustive examination of the brain as is possible. As soon as the various examinations are complete the report will be prepared. It is intended to make this as complete as possible, and insert the photographs and the result of the microscopic examination. It is, of course, expected that there will be two reports of the autopsy. One will take the view that the assassin was insane, and the other the reverse.

THAT POISONED BOUQUET.

The following is printed here, but is differently sustained: A Critic reporter called upon Dr. McWilliams this morning at his office, and inquired what disposition had been made of the suspicious bouquet sent to Guiteau's cell by his sister on the evening before the execution. Dr. McWilliams stated that when the bouquet was given to him by General Crocker he proceeded to his office, and in company with Dr. Hicks made a careful examination of the flowers, taking them apart and inspecting them minutely. The rosebuds attracted suspicion, and when turned wrong side up and shaken a fine, white powder was noticed to fall from the flowers. The buds were forced open, and when the center of the cup was exposed it was discovered that each bud contained a small quantity of the powder. The powder was taken out and placed in a vial, and will be submitted to a chemist, if Gen. Crocker or district attorney Corkhill direct it, and will be analyzed. As yet no analysis has been made, and Dr. McWilliams states that he can not positively state what the powder is, although he has little doubt that it is arsenic. It is thought that if Guiteau had known what was contained in his bouquet, or his sister had been admitted to his cell to explain it, as was probably her intention, the assassin could probably have accomplished self-destruction in a comparatively short time by chewing a few of the rose-buds.

"GONE TO GLORY."

One of the floral pieces brought to the jail to-day by Mrs. Scoville was an anchor three feet high of roses, white pinks and calla lilies, with an inscription in purple immortelles: "Poor Charley! Gone to Glory."
